

Hidden serenity

As the sun climbs high, dew still clings to many spider webs in the grasslands nearby, like this one

Dawn begins to shine over the bund of Karauwela Wewa

At mid-afternoon, the sky above Karauwela Wewa is painted with clouds that leave one in awe. But not the lone man on the waters edge, who was only concerned with bathing in the waters of the tank

Serene places in Sri Lanka are not only found on deserted beaches or the cool hill country. Above the bund of Karauwela Wewa, the sun rises over the waters that irrigate the adjacent fields of villages, east of Waegamuwa National Park. And later, over this serene setting, a majestic sky is revealed

PIX BY ROHAN CANAGASABEY

Sunrise over Karauwela Wewa, a little later